

Free2Succeed – Mentoring Program

Protective Factors are conditions or attributes in individuals, families, communities, or the larger society that, when present, mitigate or eliminate risk in individuals, families, and communities. This tool is designed to help you identify where an individual may be on a scale of 1-10 in relation to those protective factors and then develop an action plan to move up the scale in each area and its use is optional. Please refer to the last page for a more detailed explanation of each factor.

RESILIENCE

The process of adapting well in the face of adversity, trauma, tragedy, threats, or even significant sources of stress — such as family and relationship problems, serious health problems, or workplace and financial stressors. It means “bouncing back” from difficult experiences. Being resilient does not mean that a person doesn’t experience difficulty or distress. Emotional pain and sadness are common in people who have suffered major adversity or trauma in their lives. In fact, the road to resilience is likely to involve considerable emotional distress. Resilience is not a trait that people either have or do not have. It involves behaviors, thoughts, and actions that can be learned and developed in anyone.

SOCIAL CONNECTIONS

The relationships you have with the people around you. They may be close, like family, friends, and coworkers, or more distant, like people you know casually. They can be as close as next door or so far away that you only connect with them by telephone or through the Internet. Social connections can come from many sources: family, friends, other parents, neighbors, daycare providers, teachers, or clergy. Any of these sources can be valuable. However, social connections are most valuable when they provide both emotional support and practical assistance

CONCRETE SUPPORT

Meeting basic economic needs like food, shelter, clothing and health care is essential for families to thrive. Likewise, when families encounter a crisis such as domestic violence, mental illness or substance abuse, adequate services and supports need to be in place to provide stability, treatment and help for family members to get through the crisis. Individuals and families often do not know what is available to them through various programs and government agencies. They may feel they have to solve problems on their own. Being able to recognize the need for assistance and being willing to ask for help can be very beneficial.

KNOWLEDGE

What can and should be done regarding the situation and its consequences. Knowing where to find and how to use available resources and developing the skills to be able to influence your environment and set and accomplish goals. It also includes any formal education and/or specialized training, and personal, direct experience that you have. It can also include positive or negative history with family, friends and/or society.

SOCIAL-EMOTIONAL

The ability to understand the feelings of others, control your own feelings and behaviors, and get along with peers. These are necessary to attain basic skills such as cooperation, following directions, demonstrating self-control and paying attention. Feelings of trust, confidence, pride, friendship, affection and humor are all a part of a child’s social-emotional development. Social and emotional development involves learning the following skills:

- Identify and understand one’s own feelings
- Accurately read and comprehend emotional states in others
- Manage strong emotions and their expression in a constructive manner
- Regulate one’s own behavior
- Develop empathy for others
- Establish and sustain relationships
